Artist Draws Crucifixion Scene

Reverend and Mrs. W. H. Kissinger, of Natural Bridge, Virginia above, presented an unusual pre-Easter program at a recent Lions' Ladies Night. Beginning with a blank chalkboard, Mr. Kissinger drew the Crucifixion scene in pastel above during a half-hour piano interlude of related hymns and spirituals by Mrs. Kissinger. By using special lighting effects and fluorescent chalk Mr. Kissinger can change the picture from "night" to "day" — even cause "stars" to twinkle in the scene. He is virtually self-taught and credits his father with passing on a talent for painting.

Supervisors Vote $500 For RAD

Dr. J. A. Mathews and C. F. Moore, of the Rural Area Development Committee asked county supervisors on Wednesday morning for $1,000 as a "minimal" budget to carry on RAD activities.

Dr. Mathews listed an industrial brochure, "bumper stickers" to advertise Appomattox, recreation facilities and a camping site, as all - important projects for county progress.

These projects, Mathews said, are all in the process of being investigated or have been adopted by individual county clubs as going projects.

"We can't carry out these projects without support" said Fratrick.

"The county has had to borrow money the past three years, said O. W. Martin, Jr., in explaining the county financial situation.

"We need coordinated efforts", if we stop progress now, we will stagnate, said Pratrick.

"We will help in Centennial celebration, but we are not in a position to 'take over' any of the commission's responsibilities, said Mathews.

The supervisors voted to give $500 this year, and $500 next year.

Farmers Reminded To Plan Conservation Program Practices

Farmers were reminded today that now is a good time to plan or carry out certain Agricultural Conservation Program practices that can be done prior to the planting season.

According to J. A. Martin, Chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, the spring season—before the heavy plowing season starts — is the time of year when farmers, including tenant-operators, can begin much of the conservation work they plan for their land.

The Chairman points out that cost - share assistance is available under the 1963 Agricultural Conservation Program to help farmers with conservation projects on their farms, and farm operators are encouraged to visit the ASCS County Office to discuss their plans and determine whether needed program assistance is available.

In Appomattox County, he explains, a substantial amount of pasture seeding and improvement, liming farmland, strip-cropping, sod waterways, drainage and forest tree planting is done in the spring, and these are among the most important practices which can be approved for ACP aid.

ACP, the Chairman says, is one of the oldest national farm-conservation facilities and a camping site, as all - important projects for county progress.

These projects, Matthews said, are all in the process of being investigated or have been adopted by individual county clubs as going projects.

"We can't carry out these projects without support" said Fratrick.

"The county has had to borrow money the past three years, said O. W. Martin, Jr., in explaining the county financial situation.

"We need coordinated efforts", if we stop progress now, we will stagnate, said Pratrick.

The supervisors voted to give $500 this year, and $500 next year.

VPI Releases New Type Tobacco

A new variety of fire - cured tobacco, Virginia 331, has been released by the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The new variety has moderate to good resistance to the black shank disease which is becoming a serious problem in the fire-cured tobacco belt of Virginia. Yields are only moderate, but since the variety is resistant to growers on infested farms are finding it profitable.

Release of Virginia 331 was approved by Dr. H. N. Young, director of the Experiment Station. The variety was developed by Dr. R. G. Henderson, plant pathologist, and R. D. Rees, assistant agronomist. It has been tested on several farms where black shank has been a problem. In addition to several farmer evaluation tests for this year, Virginia 331 is included in tobacco variety demonstrations arranged by county agents. Growers who are having trouble with black shank should inspect these demonstrations.

No seed are available now for Virginia 331; however, a commercial supply will be available for the 1964 crop.

100% Loss In Evergreen

Fires Damage County Woodland

"Appomatox was lucky." That is the way Chief Fire Warden David M. Smith stated it in reporting two large fires in this county last Thursday, April 4. A Thursday morning fire burned off about 10 acres of woodland near Rt. 747, the Red House Road, and then a woodland fire between Evergreen and Pamplin burned approximately 40 to 50 acres of timber and underbrush, property owned by R. S. Burruss Lumbr Company and R. L. Wilson. Smith gave credit to Pamplin and Appomattox fire companies and many other volunteers for helping to control the fires.

Onlookers parked on Rt. 460 numbered as high as 200 according to one estimate, as more than 100 volunteers "backfired" the blaze at Evergreen. High winds caused "sheets of fire", Smith said and "particles of fire would blow like a whirlwind" he said, as firefighters worked to control the blaze.

Fortunately, he said, the 10 acre fire on the Red House road was under control before the second alarm sounded about 4 p.m. Fire wardens remained on duty at both fires all night Thursday, South paid tribute to all who helped. At least 15 local wardens battled the big blaze at Evergreen, and John "Ed" Harvey worked hard and diligently, he said, using Dillard Reed's tractor to plow a "fire line" to help stop the flames.

KVG Boys

Keep Virginia Green associate members from Appomatox High School were given credit for their work, too, and Paul Thompson, County Forester, said that Pamplin and Appomattox Fire companies "stood by" to protect at least two homes on Rt. 727 which probably would have been lost had the fire trucks not been on hand.

100 Per Cent Loss

Majority opinion among those who battled the Evergreen fire is that 100 per cent loss has been sustained to the woodlands there.

Suppressing Costs

Warden David Smith said Friday that anyone responsible for a fire out of control is also liable for the costs of suppressing that fire. He cautions all residents to be especially careful with matches and fire and to observe the 4 p.m. Burning Law.
